Portrait of Michael J. Fox

August 5, 2008

Today The New York Times dedicates its online "Patient Voices" section to the voices of people living with Parkinson's disease. The piece features audio interviews and photos of seven people with PD, six of whom are Team Fox members or supporters of The Michael J. Fox Foundation: Dave Eger, Alyssa Johnson, Jacqueline Vera Brown, Ken Glowienke, Evelyn Simon, and Scott Giffney (the names in bold include links to their personal pages on our Team Fox Web site).

The section, found in The New York Times' "Health Guide," explores how Parkinson's disease impacts the body and the mind, and how families cope in the face of a progressive disease. In their own words, patients share their stories about living with Parkinson's disease.

Listen to the interviews and view photos.

Additionally, read the Expert Q&A: "The Emotional Toll of Parkinson's Disease," provided by MJFF's senior medical advisor, Irene Hegeman Richard, MD.
